**REP. TOM EMMER:

** Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate Macintoon's fine foods in Waconia, Minnesota for 100 years of business success. At the beginning of the 20th century, August Macintoon began a family tradition of making homemade sausage. This tradition was commercialized in 1917 when his son Arthur bought a sausage maker from Germany and opened Macintoon's meat market in Waconia. What began as a modest business quickly transformed into a booming success as Macintoon's developed a reputation for producing quality meats. Today the business is run by Kim and Lori Macintoon and their family. While it is now a full-service supermarket, they have maintained the family tradition by offering their signature homemade sausage in the meat department. Congratulations to the entire Macintoon family for their 100-year commitment to the family business, for upholding their long-standing tradition, and for exemplifying the American Dream. We wish you another century of success.
