REP. TOM EMMER:

America is home to the world's greatest innovators, artists, entrepreneurs, and inventors. Our nation allows anyone with a good idea to become successful, and nowhere is that more apparent than in Minnesota. From life-saving inventions like the pacemaker and oxygen masks, to scotch tape and heat regulating devices that built great American companies. To the mind that wrote the Great Gatsby, our state has been home to the people and ideas that change history and fuel the world's largest economy. Intellectual property allows our nation's best and brightest to protect and sell their ideas across the globe, bolstering the many reasons trade has a substantial benefit to Minnesota's economy. If we are to maintain our place as the most successful and prosperous country this world has ever seen, the protection of intellectual property will be fundamental to our success.
