REP. TOM EMMER:

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate National Police Week, a time when we remember the men and women in blue who paid the ultimate sacrifice in order to protect and serve our great nation. The great state of Minnesota is home to many phenomenal law enforcement officers, men and women who put their lives on the line each and every day to ensure the safety and security of our communities. They live their lives to serve, and some tragically lose their lives in the line of duty. These are the true heroes. Just this past year, an officer named Deputy Steven Sandberg was shot and killed in the line of duty in St. Cloud, Minnesota. While his death was both senseless and tragic, today we remember the courageous way that he and many other fallen police officers chose to live and serve their communities. This week, in honoring fallen officers like Deputy Steven Sandberg, we remember and we honor their service and their sacrifice. Note: This appears to be a congressional floor speech rather than a TV/radio interview, as evidenced by the formal address to "Mr. Speaker."
