HOST:

and uh... right now but what we didn't we have yet we have already the g l p majority whip yet tom emmer from the great state of minnesota which was one of the ones that had the big primaries last night and uh... mister majority leader we love having you here mister wep and it's wonderful what do you think we're going to have to let you say that you do you do that is that i had before that's the proper way to say it uh... but we can call him tom because we know him uh... but you can't but your thoughts of what last night and really reveals it was interesting the lieutenant governor there as like uh... i saw her speech i was here live when all the news was breaking her acceptance speech i've never heard such a visceral anti-ice acceptance speech and my entire life and i think he's bad news

REP. TOM EMMER:

that minnesota was very interesting last night that i i want to tie it to uh... to uh... michigan and even wisconsin you guys were talking about polling before i came and i think john hit it better better than anybody when he talked about landlines i i i would argue to you guys the reason polls are no good is we're doing the same type of polling week always done it's mathematically defensible the problem is nobody has a landline nobody's answering their phone and i know this is going to surprise some your listeners when people do answer the phone and answer survey they're not always telling the truth so polls the reason that uh... you know everybody uses them is because they can point to him and say this is mathematically correct the problem is the data is not complete and it's not accurate so you're getting all these different things you can look at trends but polls can't tell you exactly where where people are at because they don't necessarily want you to know minnesota great example you know they had uh... the uh... governor's race they had uh... mike uh... lindell actually winning the governor's race and i know he feels differently about it but you know the president's uh... endorsement probably helped mike uh... but mike still had to run a campaign right he had to like the uh... traveling all over the state and doing these events and everything else you know nobody's like donald j trump and uh... john you and i have talked about this he is relentless he's got energy that uh... people half his age don't have and he's doing rallies everywhere uh... that wasn't necessarily happening and you saw it come out in the result last night on the democrat side two things one the polls seem to be closer to accurate because uh... i think peggy flanigan uh... who you pointed out is insane uh... talk about a minneapolis deep liberal that does not fit main street minnesota let alone main street u.s.a. and they're gonna find that out when november comes around but you uh... you have a running against angie craig and that this is what i want to tie together with michigan so if it you look at minnesota decided angie craig was the standard-bearer for quote-unquote moderates uh... she is not a great candidate she ran a terrible campaign and guess what the results are exactly what she deserved based on the campaign she ran it's the same thing that i see in michigan everybody wants to talk about this nutbag else i had who doesn't love america he hates america we deserve nine eleven he thinks football is is about toxic masculinity i mean he's everything that isn't what we uh... believe in in this country and everybody wants to make an argument that somehow he is selling that i had nobody talks about hailey stevens the uh... the democrats candidate that took him on she's horrible she was a terrible candidate she uh... you know again the results it shows the uh... the democrats are putting up people because of their arrogance whether they're on the far left the anarchist uh... communist the marxist the socialist uh... or their so-called uh... moderates you know they're progressive moderates there is no such thing by the way uh... but they're trying to tell themselves that this is what uh... americans agree with uh... they're having a little success in these primaries but i expect when november rolls around you'll see that michelle tafoya is going to uh... be the next senator from the state of minnesota and peggy flanagan she's going to disappear hopefully

HOST:

yeah i i i think michelle is a really great candidate to uh... boy oh boy judge weinberg congressman good to talk to you again sir i want to ask you this what's wrong with uh... your colleagues in the congress where they will not stand up she's crazy radical islamists and progressives as soon as they win the primary that everybody rallies around them as if they are not legitimized i don't understand where's your integrity where is that backbone was a moral compass

REP. TOM EMMER:

well you can you could ask that a few years ago i mean i'll just take you back by at a year ago when uh... virginia was electing a new governor in the new attorney general you got an attorney general candidate on the democrat ticket who is fantasizing about uh... the murders of his uh... opponents family his children and his opponent uh... and they just held their nose and voted for many way i think uh... on the other side of the aisle it for the most part it happens to be that's our person that's who were supporting they don't have a uh... that core where uh... right wrong matters they just want to uh... they want to win but they've lost their way i mean if if you look at the people that are campaigning uh... they're going to support anti american candidates i'd just i don't see that any well i think they've gone way too far now uh... the key though for us on the republican side we got to start being a little bit more sensitive to the voters better eighteen to thirty five you know these kids they've got more bills than any other generation uh... at their time they're paying for streaming services and cell phones and things that we never even contemplated forty years ago and they are struggling to make ends meet i think we've got to start addressing those issues and making sure that they understand the reason this country is so great is because you don't have to have the government telling you who you can associate with what you can buy how much of it you can have when you can have it i mean they're gonna find out under mandami which you guys are living uh... living it right now you know uh... confiscation of private property and uh... government controlled uh... food supply and energy supply it's not the way to go it's never worked anywhere else just take a look at venezuela should be one of the richest countries on the face of the planet with the oil reserves uh... that sit underneath it and yet no it's one of the poorest uh... and it's it's uh... been destroyed by a decade plus of these quote-unquote socialist but they're well beyond that they're marxist

HOST:

yeah no you're right uh... very very dangerous uh... rudy washington former deputy mayor yes uh...

RUDY WASHINGTON:

uh... mister congressman we were talking about this during the briefing before coming on the air and i was pointing out that for the first time uh... millennials in gen z's are larger than the baby boomers so it so yes you're right we better speak to the eighteen to forty-year-old you know and feel like it's hopeless and they're willing to try anything you know our school system has failed them we need to start addressing that as republicans and begin to create some hope for these young people

REP. TOM EMMER:

yeah you're you're spot on the other thing is you point out the other big failure we've had is our education system i mean there was a twenty six-year-old quoted uh... at first avenue last night a peggy flanagan supporter saying republicans just answer to uh... corporations and it's like how did you get to be twenty six years old and your understanding of political uh... differences is that uh... one dimensional in a it's like you'd be you know you watch people ask a question what's that commonly harris is that number one policy that you support and they sit there for rudy they mumble that i i i don't know if they don't know it's just an emotional response and if we're not doing something about it like you say if we're not offering a value proposition that this is why the policies that republicans that donald trump is putting forward this is why they will make your life better and they are better for you uh... well then we're no better than the other side we get we gotta start making it more clear why it is that what republicans talk about when they say we want you to keep more of your own money why because we believe you make better decisions for yourself than somebody else some bureaucrat in the government might make it it's it's a you know the problem you guys are looking at in new york what is it sixty thousand open i apartment units and the reason they're open is because over regulation because landlords don't want to put the money in to make bring them up to speed that so it's it's cheaper for them to just leave them open that's not an answer to what ails us and we're gonna have to start coming up with solutions

HOST (JOHN):

socialism doesn't work that's the big thing that people are starting to realize and i think the even the common sense democrats nationally in the common sense republicans realize it that the common sense democrats in common sense republicans have to work together for common sense uh... that's exactly right and it's funny that you use that line john because last night when uh... michelle to foyer was that she does look our campaign is about common sense uh... and frankly uh... what's on the ballot in november is common sense versus insanity and i i think she's right

REP. TOM EMMER:

that's exactly right and it's funny that you use that line john because last night when uh... michelle to foyer was that she does look our campaign is about common sense uh... and frankly uh... what's on the ballot in november is common sense versus insanity and i i think she's right

HOST:

yeah i do too well they'll be a lot of eyes on minnesota a lot of eyes obviously on the house so many layers that you are front row and center to uh... house majority whip tom emmer
