*REP. TOM EMMER:

 You have no idea. After today, 47 states will have held their primary elections. Our biggest takeaway is that we no longer have a two-party system in this country. We no longer have two parties that believe in our form of government and in our form of government is the best way to govern a country. On November 3rd, more than 120 candidates, backed by the self-named, self-proclaimed Democratic Socialists of America, which all you people keep parroting, more appropriately they should be referred to as the Communists of America, will appear on ballots all across this country. This includes dozens of congressional candidates. In case anyone needs a refresher, these people support open borders, dismantling our military, eliminating the free market, supporting gender mutilation of our children, and defunding local, state, and federal law enforcement. Their platform is blatantly anti-American. They hate America. There is nothing democratic about socialism. They are Communists. We've got a candidate for U.S. Senate, Abdul El-Sayed in Michigan, who has pledged support after Lisa wants to bring up Minnesota, I'll bring up Michigan. Because Abdul El-Sayed, supposedly this great candidate, nobody pointed out who was running against him, it might be a reason why that didn't work out, but this guy who is going to run as the Communist alternative in Michigan to Mike Rogers, has pledged support for the leader of the terrorist group, the Muslim Brotherhood. El-Sayed also refuses to condemn rhetoric that we deserved 9-11. We got the 25th anniversary coming up here. That's totally inappropriate. Democrats are nominating people just like Ilhan Omar, who literally hate America. This is not good for real Democrats, but it's also not good for our nation. We have a fight brewing between common sense and Communism. This week, the House is voting on a resolution denouncing socialism, and I'm hoping our colleagues across the aisle might join in that common sense vote. With that, I'll turn it over to our leader, Steve Scalise.
