Rep. Tom Emmer on Washington Watch with Tony Perkins

Broadcast: October 21, 2026 • Duration: 6:44

TONY:

Joining us now to discuss is House Majority Whip Tom Emmer of Minnesota. He represents the 6th Congressional District. Whip Emmer, welcome back to Washington Watch. Thanks for joining us.

REP. TOM EMMER:

Great to be with you, Tony. Forgive me for my casual nature. 13 days to go. We're on the campaign trail.

TONY:

I understand. I've been talking to your colleagues who are out there as well. Let me ask you this. You know, this should get the attention of voters, should it not? when you look at France that's in this position because of all of its socialistic types of policies, which is exactly what those who are running with the Socialist Democratic Party of America want more of.

REP. TOM EMMER:

Well, and I really appreciate you raising the topic because part of the issue is our press is not reporting accurately or in detail what is going on. When you talk about France, Those are riots. Those are violent, destructive riots. This term that was created during the pandemic and the George Floyd episode of civil unrest is just a way to soften what's really going on. And France has a major problem that should be a huge warning to people in this country. When you let people into your country that are not coming to be part of your country, They're coming to undo your country and create their own reality. Guess what? This is what it leads to. And yes, you're correct about the economics in France. They have created that problem, but they don't have an economy like the United States of America. They haven't been growing for years, Tony. And that's part of the problem. So they're stuck in this running up the down escalator and the down escalator has been going faster and faster. And now those enemies of Western civilization and freedom are starting to show themselves in a big way in France. And the United States and voters here should not only be informed, but they should be taking serious notice of what's going on in France right now.

TONY:

When you look at some of the policies that are being advanced by the socialists, some of the socialist candidates in our own country in this cycle, that's expanding our current obligations as a government, social policies that raise our debt and deficit. I mean, we could be in that same situation. We've already seen your home state, Minnesota. We've seen some of the violence that took place during the pandemic. I mean, we could make ourselves a prime candidate for this if we don't make good choices in this election.

No, that's exactly right. I mean, this really is a battle between good and evil. And I will tell you, the people that hate America, that are running on the other side, they're evil. That's all you can say. I mean, the idea that we're going to call them what they want to be called, and I respect that, Tony, the DSA, but I'm not going to do it. This is a product of a guy who's never done anything in his life, never built anything, never run anything. All he's ever done is flap his gums about anti-American and how bad we are to men and women. Bernie Sanders should not be telling us what to call them. There is nothing democratic about socialism. And by the way, for the last hundred years, they wanted us to call them progressives, which also is a nothing term. They wanted us to call them progressives because they were already socialist. But it wasn't cool in the last century to call yourself a socialist. In 2018, they arrived in Washington, D.C. You remember Ilhan Omar from Minnesota, Ocasio-Cortez from Washington, Rashida Pottymouth Tlaib from Detroit. They came in and proudly announced the socialists have arrived. I'm going to tell you, they're not socialists anymore, Tony. These are Marxists. These are people who are literally looking to rewrite how America operates. They do not believe in the Constitution. Quite frankly, they probably I find it stunning that they are able to run for elected office in this country on a platform that literally wants to rewrite the Constitution, open borders, defund the police, defund prisons, Tony. I mean, they want government only health care. It's this is how do you how do you take a oath to uphold the Constitution when you want to do away with it? You can't. I mean, this is like Minnesota. We have another failed paper that writes from the left. All it is is an activist paper run by Tim Wall's former commerce commissioner. They actually published an editorial in the last two weeks that was titled Why Sharia Law is Consistent with the U.S. Constitution. Tony, I mean, that's a fantasy. They're not even close. Sharia law should not be recognized anywhere in the West. It should be outlawed in the West. The United States Constitution is a special document that should be protected. It's incompatible with our Constitution. It just doesn't work.

TONY:

I want to go back to the economics. We just have about a minute left. But the government in France is actually trying to reduce its deficit, because it's unsustainable. And that, in part, is what has fueled the protests, which has, as you said, others have come in making these very violent. Again, we could be going down the same path. Now is the time to take notice and choices we make in just a couple of weeks will determine that course.

REP. TOM EMMER:

No, you're right. Look, Donald J. Trump and Republicans, we haven't done everything, but we've done a lot. Not only is the southern border sealed, The largest tax cut has been passed. No taxes on tips, etc. The largest cut in spending ever was done a year ago. Tony, it's not enough. The reason you need to elect Republicans and hold your majority in the House and the Senate, this really is about making sure that we can finish what we've started to put the United States of America back in a good fiscal position to survive for the next 250 years. We should be learning from lessons like France. And you know this is not just France. This is Western Europe. This is a problem worldwide that we better get our hands around.

TONY:

Tom Emmer, thank you so much for taking time off the campaign trail to join us. I appreciate it greatly.

REP. TOM EMMER:

Thanks for having me, Tony.
