Rep. Tom Emmer on Big Money in the Morning

Broadcast: October 14, 2026 • Duration: 6:10

BRIAN:

Here now is Minnesota Congressman and House Majority Whip, Tom Emmer. Whip, great to see you, sir. Ilhan Omar says this is a baseless, partisan attack. How do you respond to that?

REP. TOM EMMER:

Well, I'll give you two things. Good morning, Brian. I think first off, this is the, she is the eternal victim. Whenever she is being held accountable, this person literally screams racist, xenophobe, lies, partisan, whatever. It's an attack on poor little me. In fact, you know, there have been rumors for years about immigration fraud. There was recently a $30 million accounting error, I guess, on her financial disclosures. And the list goes on. Here's what I would say, is that a federal district court judge signed off on a search warrant, Brian. What does that mean? That means that that federal district court judge found probable cause for the potential commission of a federal crime. That's pretty darn serious, and that's the only reason the government comes in and searches your home. What they're looking for, Tom Holman has told us, Judge Pirro has told us, there is an ongoing investigation. I look forward to hearing more. I can tell you that the people that I represent at home, they believe it's high time that Ilhan Omar and others be held accountable for breaking the law.

BRIAN:

Well, you mentioned the folks at home, I'm a Minnesotan. One thing I know people in Minnesota want to know is how was she or was she tied to all the billions in fraud that have happened in Minnesota? Is any of that possibly going to be a part of any of the investigations that are happening right now?

REP. TOM EMMER:

Well, actually, you're talking about the Feeding Our Future scandal, where Somali fraudsters built Minnesota taxpayers and U.S. taxpayers out of $250 million. The Feeding Our Future program was actually funded through a program created by none other than Ilhan Omar. She's the one who created the federal program. She's the one who is seen celebrating with her neighbors, several of which are indicted and convicted as Somali fraudsters involved in the pandemic, the largest pandemic theft that we had, the $250 million Feeding Our Future theft. I think she was right in the middle of it. The real question, Brian, is, is there enough there to of a violation, active violation of a federal crime that she will be held accountable?

BRIAN:

Well, we will follow it, sir. Meantime, I want to talk with you about this. You took a trip to Texas earlier this week, huddling with GOP candidates in the competitive Texas House seats. All right. So talk about the House races there. But you know, I'm also going to ask you about some of the bigger races in the Senate and the governor's race as well. But what did you see and hear this week, Whip Emmer?

Well, it was pretty amazing. President Trump says it all the time, and he's right. You didn't need to change the laws. We just needed a new president. Since Donald Trump has become president, the border is completely sealed, Brian. It was it was pretty stunning to be down on the border in McAllen, Texas, and see that there was no one attempting to come across the border. It was rather peaceful. And the candidates that I had with me, you're going to see, if not all of them, almost all of them are going to be in Congress. And they were very impressed. Obviously, they're Texans and they were telling me the stories of how bad it was under Joe Biden and frankly, how much better it has been under President Donald J. Trump.

BRIAN:

All right. Paxton, Tallarico, Whip Emmer, what's going to happen? How do you read it?

REP. TOM EMMER:

Well, the obviously people are disappointed when their candidate does not win in a runoff or in a primary. But Republicans in Texas know what's at stake, Brian. They understand that this Tallarico called Tallarico by President Trump is wildly not normal. I mean, the things that he advocates for, frankly, are are sick. They are not mainstream. They are way outside of that. Paxton got a slow start, I think, and Republicans were a little divided on it. I'm going to tell you, I've been in Texas a couple of times and I think this week they have turned the corner. I think Republicans are starting to get on board. They're starting to move. And I expect Ken Paxton to win. And I expect Republicans to show up and help us take the majority, if not all of those new seats in Texas as well in the U.S. House.

BRIAN:

I'm looking at the polls on the House overall, control the House, Whip Emmer. It is looking like Republicans lose control of the House. You're pulling money out of races that you think might be goners, trying to put them into races where there's still hope. Is that the real state of play? Is the House the Democrats right now?

REP. TOM EMMER:

Well, you got to look at polls because that's all you got, Brian. But let's be realistic. There was there were two polls that came out on the same day a couple of weeks ago in Iowa. One had Ashley Hinson up by five points. The other one had her down seven in the same day. Two different polls. Same state. I remember going into the twenty twenty four election. They were showing I think it was the Des Moines Register at a poll that showed Donald Trump down 17 points to Congress. So I discount those. What's happening right now is money's being moved around where it is most efficient. People say, oh, they're they're cutting the string on this candidate. No, no, that's not true. Perhaps that candidate is stable. Perhaps that candidate is doing what he or she needs to do to win. And that money is better used somewhere else. This is still well in in Republicans hands. If we have one thing, Brian, if Republicans show up to vote, which is that's the issue in a midterm, the party in the White House is usually satisfied. All right. I have people show up. We'll be fine.

BRIAN:

Turnout. Whip hammer. Great to see you. Thanks for being here this morning.

REP. TOM EMMER:

Thanks, Brian.
