*REP. TOM EMMER:

 From sheriffs to deputies in Wright County, Minnesota, to Capitol Police officers right here in Washington, D.C., this National Police Week, we owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to the men and women who keep our communities safe. House Republicans will always back the blue and Lisa's right. Meanwhile, Democrats continue their efforts to defund the police and return to the soft-on-crime, anti-law-enforcement chaos of the Biden administration. In blue states and blue cities across this country, the danger of Democrats' pro-criminal policies has been put on full display. Just last week in New York, an innocent 76-year-old retired teacher was pushed down the subway stairs and killed by a criminal who had already been arrested four times this year alone. And how could anyone forget the innocent young woman who was violently stabbed in the throat on a train in North Carolina by a man with 14 prior arrests? Releasing violent criminals back into our communities jeopardizes public safety, demoralizes police officers, and makes the job of law enforcement even more dangerous than it already is. But it's not just Democrat policies that risk the safety of our men and women in blue. It's their anti-police rhetoric. Look no further than my state's sorry excuse for a governor, Tim Walz, who actually called federal law enforcement the modern-day Gestapo. Only months after Walz's statement, one of these officers was dragged by a car and severely injured. Crime, chaos, and catastrophe are the reliable results of Democrat leadership. In contrast to this, Republicans are building on our work to support law enforcement and restore safety to our American streets. Under President Trump's law-and-order agenda, the murder rate has actually dropped to its lowest rate in 125 years. Thanks to no tax on overtime that Lisa was referring to and the Working Families Tax Cuts, officers have more money to support their families. And this week, we're going to vote on more common-sense legislation to empower law enforcement and defend the police, not defund them. To all the men and women who wear the uniform every day, who work long hours away from your families, who put your lives on the line for our safety, I think all of us say thank you. One week will never be enough to honor your bravery, sacrifice, and your service. And with that, I turn it over to our great leader, Steve Scalise.
